For diverse hospice care!

Everyone has the right to die and grieve with dignity. We are committed to promoting fairness, diversity and active involvement in hospice work.

- Access for all: We want to make hospice support available to everyone.
- Valuing diversity: We recognise and honour different life and end-of-life experiences.
- Strengthening participation and sharing: We encourage people with diverse experiences to be part of hospice work.

By society.
For society.

Being there for people.

A photograph of a garden path made of stone slabs, lined with lush green plants and pink flowers. The path leads into the distance, and the scene is bathed in warm, golden light, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The background is softly blurred, showing more greenery and a hint of a building.

End of life care

We are an outpatient hospice service. Dying is a part of life, but it can feel frightening. We offer guidance and support during this difficult time.

We are here for people who are dying. We're here to listen, to care, and to support.

What we do:

- Our volunteers support people at the end of life, wherever they live – at home, in a care home, or in a hospital.
- Our full-time staff train volunteers and offer advice and guidance to a dying person's loved ones and professionals.

Who is it for?

Hospice care is for everyone. It doesn't matter where you come from, who you love, what language you speak or what you believe in. Our support is free of charge.

Grief support

Grief is a part of life. Losing a loved one is incredibly painful. It changes everything and the grieving process can be exhausting and sometimes lonely.

We are here for people who are grieving. We listen, share quiet moments and spend time together in ways that matter.

What we do:

- We offer one-on-one counselling.
- We provide group settings to share experiences with others.
- We do activities together, such as hiking, yoga or dancing.

For grieving children and young people, we offer a program called "Everything is Different", which provides a safe space to express sadness, spend time with others and be creative.

Education and counselling

Training for hospice volunteers

We offer courses for individuals who wish to support people at the end of life on a voluntary basis.

End-of-life care course

We provide knowledge about dying, death and grief, and encourage participants to be there for those who are dying or grieving.

Continued training for professionals

We offer practical, ongoing training on the following topics:

- Supporting people at the end of life and those who are grieving.
- Diversity in hospice work, e.g. supporting people with dementia, disabilities or from migrant backgrounds.

Counselling for professionals

We offer counselling for professionals on matters related to dying, death and grief and support them in applying these topics in their daily practice.
